THE FUNCTION OF THE PULPIT

Rabbi Ferdinand M. Isserman

From time to time we hear laymen discussing what a rabbi should or should not preach about. Usually these discussions are not concerned with fundamental principles. They crop out, when some rabbi has made utterances which were either unconventional or unpopular. The laymen, annoyed by them, do not stop to analyze, but rush to condemn. Too frequently the laity looks to the pulpit to voice its own ideals. The good sermon is the sermon which coincides with the views of the pew.

But the rabbinate would be a weak institution, if rabbis permitted the comfort-loving or statusquo-loving laymen to dictate the themes for pulpit addresses. We believe that the rabbi is not the curator of a museum of Jewish antiquities, which are to be displayed for admiration on stated occasions. We believe and that belief is shared by most rabbis that the rabbi is the heir of the prophetic traditions, and must to-day serve as the prophetic voice and articulate conscience of his community. Just as the prophets were concerned with vital problems, so must the rabbis. Just as the prophets spoke fearlessly not on abstract principles but on practical issues so must the rabbis. Just as the prophets became the champions of unpopular causes, so must the rabbis. Congregations must not be stampeded when hostile criticisms are aimed at their religious leaders for having dared to tackle intelligently and courageously some controversial social and spiritual problems. Congregations should rejoice and encourage the prophetic spirit in the rabbi.

And even if congregations do not encourage it, and condemn it, the rabbi worthy of his calling will ignore such condemnation. He will not seek popularity at the expense of his conscience. If he must choose between his congregation and between Isaiah, he will choose Isaiah. If he must choose between hearing the voice of the laity and hearing the voice of God, he will choose to hear the voice of God. The pulpit occupant is not a mob echo. He is a religious LEADER.

THE JEWISH SPIRIT

A large part of the Jewish community was stunned last Sunday when it heard of the tragic end of Lewis Phillips, the son of Alderman Nathan Phillips, who was instantly killed by an automobile, while on the sidewalk near his home, in the act of dropping a letter in a mail box. We saw the stricken father shortly after the accident. Of course, he was crushed and grief-stricken. But we rejoiced that midst his great pain, he still could think kindly of the individual whose carelessness may have caused the premature death of his son, a sweet, brave intelligent lad. He said that "if that poor fellow (meaning the driver of the car) is brought to trial, I shall appear before the judge and plead leniency. My boy's life cannot be restored by punishing the autoist, even if he deserved it." These were the words of a heroic, spiritually sensitive man. They exemplify the finest Jewish spirit. It is such spirit displayed in a moment of crisis which indicates the majestic beauty and profound spirituality of Israel's faith. The 'eye for an eye' attitude, long discarded by Jewish teachers, is taboo with spiritually minded Jews. Alderman Phillips has given a fine demonstration of Judaism.

THE MIZRACHI SITUATION

This week we will use our alloteed space in dealing with the letter of protest against our attitude towards the Mizrachi which appeared in a recent issue of the REVIEW over the signature of Moses Levene, Secretary of the American Mizrachi organization.

Mr. Levene showed that he was greatly exercised over our unsympathetic treatment of his organization, and some of his epithets indicated a loss of the poise and balance enjoined by our sages on their students and disciples.

We presume that it was owing to his state of extreme perturbation that Mr. Levene completely overlooked the main point in our editorial, and failed utterly to refer to or deal with it in any manner. It was the secondary or casual observations, the obiter dicta, as it were, that seemed to have evoked his strongest reactions, and his most heated retorts. Even if we assumed that all our minor statements were wrong, there still remains unchallenged the important major theme which we propounded in our article. This we defy the Mizrachi to refute.

Mr. Levene says in his letter that our "statement that the Mizrachi has not held a convention for years is false from top to bottom." He proceeds to inform us that the Mizrachi had held conventions in May, 1925, in November, 1927 and in January 1928. It is unfortunate that at the time of our writing we had not at our disposal any newspaper files for reference. We had to depend on our memory and general knowledge of the affairs of Zionism, based on many years of close following up of the Jewish press. We were sure that our impression of the pathetic weakness of the Mizrachi organization was sound. Well, we have consulted newspaper files, and we can assure Mr. Levene that what we said was not "false from top to bottom".

On the face of it, Mr. Levene is misleading when he states that the Mizrachi held one convention in November 1927, and another one in January, 1928, only two months apart. What was held in November 1927 was probably a minor executive conference. Now it is noticeable that the gap between the conventions of May 1925, and January 1928 was one of two years and nine months. An organization which is supposed to hold conventions every year, or every eighteen months cannot be in a very healthy state when it allows the occurrence of a lapse of nearly three years between conventions.

What was the nature of the 1928 convention? One glance at the newspaper of that date recalled to us the hopeless situation of the organization as disclosed at the convention. At the Boston Convention on January 8, 9 and 10, 1928, the Mizrachi party presented a picture of despair. It had not convened for nearly three years. Its financial report showed a revenue of thirty-six thousand dollars and a deficit of twenty-nine thousand dollars. The administration was severely criticized and condemned for its inactivity and incompetence. Chaos reigned. When it came to electing an incoming executive, the convention found it impossible to procure anyone able or willing to assume the presidency. The suggestion was then made to have a praesidium of three. The convention could not find three men who jointly could fill the position. The convention dispersed without electing a president. Months later the party

Says the Landscape Gardener:
TO THE MAN
Who Takes Pride In His Yard
Tell Him That
It is a good idea to get one's coal in before the start of the growing season before the grass, flowers and shrubs commence showing life.
Remember that the shrubbery, planted to hide the coal chute perhaps, will be in bud. Later these shrubs will not only hide the entrance to the cellar but will make access impossible without some damage to the plants. Always regardless of the care exercised.
While tender young shoots offer little resistance to heavy delivery equipment, plants not immediately adjacent to the coal bin may be easily broken. Be protected by the delivery-men of reliable firms. Therefore, know your coal dealer who knows his drivers.

The Rise of David Levinsky

BOOK VI

A GREENHORN NO LONGER

CHAPTER II

One morning, after breakfast, when I was about to leave the house and Mrs. Levinsky was detaining me, trying to exact a promise that I should get somebody to share the lounge with me, I said:

"I'll see about it. I must be going. Good-bye!" At this I took her hand, ostensibly in farewell.

"Good-by," she said, coloring and trying to free herself.

"Good-by," I repeated, shaking her hand gently and smiling upon her.

She wrenched out her hand. I took hold of her chin, but she shook it free.

"Don't," she said, shyly, turning away.

"What's the matter?" I said, gaily.

She faced about again. "I'll tell you what the matter is," she said. "If you do that again you will have to move. If you think I am one of those landladies—you know the kind I mean—you are mistaken."

She uttered it in calm, rather amicable accents. So I replied:

"Why, why, of course I don't! Indeed you are the most respectable and the most sweet-looking woman in the world!"

I stepped up close to her and reached out my hand to seize hold of her bare arm.

"None of that, mister!" she flared up, drawing back. "Keep your hands where they belong. If you try that again I'll break every bone in your body. May both my hands be paralyzed if I don't!"

"S-sh," I implored. Which only added fuel to her rage.

"S-sh nothing! I'll call in all the neighbors of the house and tell them the kind of pious man you are. Saying his prayers three times a day, indeed!"

I sneaked out of the house like a thief. I was wretched all day, wondering how I should come to supper in the evening. I wondered whether she was going to deliver me over to the jealous wrath of her husband. I should have willingly forfeited my trunk and settled in another place, but Mrs. Levinsky had an approximate knowledge of the places where I was likely to do business and there was the danger of a scene from her. Maximum Max's theory did not seem to count for much. But then he had said that one must know "how to go about it." Perhaps I had been too hasty.

Late in the afternoon of that day Mrs. Levinsky came to see me. Pretending to be passing along on some errand, she paused in front of my cart, accosting me pleasantly.

"I'll bet you are angry with me," she said, smiling broadly.

"I am not angry at all," I answered, with feigned moroseness. "But you certainly have a tongue. Whew! And, well you can't take a joke."

"I did not mean to hurt your feelings, Mr. Levinsky. May my luck be as good as is my friendship for you. I certainly wish you no evil. May God give me all the things I wish you. I just want you to behave yourself. That's all. I am so much older than you, anyhow. Look for somebody of your own age. You are not angry at me, are you?" she added, suavely.

She simply could not afford to lose the rent I paid her.

Since then she held herself at a respectful distance from me.

I called on smiling Mrs. Dienstog, my former landlady, in whose house I was no stranger. I timed this visit at an hour when I knew her to be alone.

In this venture I met with scarcely any resistance at first. She let me hold her hand and caress it and tell her how soft and tender it was.

"Do you think so?" she said, coyly, her eyes clouding with embarrassment. "I don't think they are soft at all. They would be if I did not have so much washing and scrubbing to do." Then she added, sadly: "America has made a servant of me. A land of gold, indeed! When I was in my father's house I did not have to scrub floors."

I attempted to raise her wrist to my lips, but she checked me. She did not break away from me, however. She held me off, but she did not let go off the index finger of my right hand, which she clutched with all her might, playfully. As we struggled, we both laughed nervously. At last I wrenched my finger from her grip, and before she had time to thwart my purpose she was in my arms. I was aiming a kiss at her lips, but she continued to turn and twist, trying to clap her hand over my mouth as she did so, and my kiss landed on one side of her chin.

"Just one more, dearest," I [illegible], "Only one on your sweet little [illegible] my dove. Only one. Only one."

She yielded. Our lips joined in a feverish kiss. Then she thrust me away from her and, after a pause, shook her finger at me with a good-natured gesture, as much as to say, "You must not do that, bad boy, you."

I went away in high feather.

I called on Mrs. Dienstog [illegible] the very next morning. She received me well, but the first thing she did after returning my greeting was to throw the door wide open and to offer me a chair in full view of the hallway.

"Oh, shut the door," I whispered, in disgust. "Don't be foolish."

She shook her head.

"Just one kiss," I begged her. "You are so sweet."

She held firm.

I came away sorely disappointed, but convinced that her inflexibility was a mere matter of practical common sense.

I kept these experiences and reflections to myself. Nor did an indecent word ever cross my lips. In the street, while attending to my business, I heard uncouth language quite often. The other push-cart men would utter the most revolting improprieties in the hearing of the women peddlers, or even address such talk to them as a matter of course. Nor was it an uncommon incident for a peddler to fire a volley of obscenities at a departing housewife who had priced something on his cart without buying it. These things scandalized me beyond words. I could never get accustomed to them.

"Look at Levinsky standing there quiet as a kitten," the other peddlers would twit me. "One would think he is so innocent he doesn't know how to count two. Shy young fellows are the worst devils in the world."

They were partly mistaken, during the first few weeks of my acquaintance, at least. For the last thread that bound me to chastity was still unbroken. It was rapidly wearing away, though.

CHAPTER III

The last thread snapped. It was the beginning of a period of unrestrained misconduct. Intoxicated by the novelty of yielding to Satan, I gave him a free hand and the result was months of debauchery and self-disgust. The underworld women I met, the humdrum filth of their life and their matter-of-fact, business-like attitude toward it never ceased to revolt and repel me. I never left a [illegible] of this kind without abominating her and myself, yet I would soon, sometimes during the very same evening, call on her again or on some other woman of her class.

Many of these women would simulate love, but they failed to deceive me. I knew that they lied and shammed to me just as I did to my customers, and their insincerities were only another source of repugnance to me. But I frequented them in spite of it all, in spite of myself. I spent on them more than I could afford. Sometimes I would borrow money or pawn something for the purpose of calling on them.

The fact that these wretched women were not segregated as they were in my native town probably had something to do with it. Instead of being confined to a fixed out-of-the-way locality, they were allowed to live in the same tenement-houses with respectable people, beckoning to men from the front steps, under open protection from the police. Indeed, the police, as silent partners in the profits of their shame, plainly encouraged this vile traffic. All of which undoubtedly helped to make a profligate of me, but, of course, it would be preposterous to charge it all, or even chiefly, to the police.

My wild oats were flavored with a sense of my failure as a business man, by my homesickness and passion for Matilda. My push cart bored me. I was hungry for intellectual interest, for novel sensations. I was restless. Sometimes I would stop from business in the middle of the day to plunge into a page of Talmud at some near-by synagogue, and sometimes I would lay down the holy book in the middle of a sentence and betake myself to the residence of some fallen woman.

In my loneliness I would look for some human element in my acquaintance with these women. I would ply them with questions about their antecedents, their family connections, as my mother had done the girl from "That" Street.

As a rule, my questions bored them and their answers were obvious fabrications, but there were some exceptions.

One of these, a plump, handsome, languid-eyed female named Bertha, occupied two tiny rooms in which she lived with her ten-year-old daughter. One of the two rooms was often full of men, some of them with heavy beards, who would sit there, each awaiting his turn, as patients do in the reception-room of a physician, and whiling their time away by chaffing the little girl upon her mother's occupation and her own future. Some of the questions and jokes they would address to her were of the most revolting nature, whereupon she would reply, "Oh, go to hell!" or stick out her tongue resentfully.

One day I asked Bertha why she was giving her child this sort of bringing up.

"I once tried to keep her in another place, with a respectable family," she replied ruefully. "But she would not stay there. Besides, I missed her so much I could not stand it."

Another fallen woman who was frank with me proved to be a native of Antomir. When she heard that I was from the same place she flushed with excitement.

"Go away!" she shouted. "You're fooling me."

We talked of the streets, lanes, and yards of our birthplace, she hailing every name I uttered with outbursts of wistful enthusiasm.

I wondered whether she knew of my mother's sensational death, but I never disclosed my identity to her, though she, on her part, told me with impetuous frankness the whole story of her life.

"You are a Talmudist, aren't you?" she asked.

"How do you know?"

"How do I know! As if it could not be seen by your face." A little later she said: "I am sorry you came here. Honest. You should have stayed at home and stuck to your holy books. It would have been a thousand times better than coming to America and calling on girls like myself. Honest."

She was known as Argentine Rachael.

It was from her that I first heard of the relations existing between the underworld and the police of New York. But then my idea of the Russian police had always been associated in my mind with everything cruel and dishonest, so the corruption of the New York police did not seem to be anything unusual.

One day she said to me: "If you want a good street corner for your cart I can fix it for you. I know Cuff-Button Leary."

"Who is he?"

"Why, have you never heard about him?"

"Is he a big police officer?"

"Bigger. The police are afraid of him."

"Why?"

"Because he is the boss. He is the district leader. What he says goes."

"What is a politician party?" I asked.

She tried to define it and, failing in her attempt, she said, with a giggle: "Oh, you are a boob. You certainly are

It Came to Pass That——

Jewish public school opened at Alt-Ofen, 1784. One provision of the toleranzedikt of the Emperor Joseph II of January 2nd., 1782, had been that the Jews were to create a fund for the organization and maintenance of public schools, which were to be under the supervision of the ordinary Governmental inspectors. This innovation had been enthusiastically welcomed by Naphtali Herz Wessely, the neo-Hebrew poet and litterateur, who advocated it in a series of letters addressed to the communities of the realm. One of the first institutions set up in consequence of this was the school at Alt-Ofen, now an integral part of Budapest. So great was the apprehension raised by its opening that public proclamation was made that any disturbance would be punishable by flogging. Slowly, however, the new institution established its name so that it ultimately acquired a reputation throughout the country.

MAY 18TH.

Synod at Forli, 1418. Terrified at the dangers to which the anti-Hussite reaction exposed them, the Italian communities had sent representatives to Bologna at the end of 1415 to decide upon steps for the common protection. In conformity with the arrangements then arrived at, a further representative congress met two and a half years later at Forli, in the Romagna. Here it was determined to send a deputation to the newly-appointed Pope, Martin V, to obtain from him a confirmation of past privileges. To defray the expenses of this, a graduated tax was levied upon the individual members of the communities. At the same time the Synod issued a number of regulations calculated to avert the Divine wrath by improving the moral tone of the Jews of the country and at the same time to minimise Christian jealousy. Thus, gambling and games of chance were prohibited, while luxury in costume and festivities was sternly restricted. A further representative congress took place in Florence in 1428.

MAY 19TH.

Death of Isaac alFasi, 1103. Born (as his name shows) in the vicinity of Fez, he had to flee for his life, in his sixyt-fifth year, by reason of a slanderous denunciation to the government. Ultimately he became Rabbi at Lucena, in Spain, where he died, on Sivan 10th, 4863, at the ripe age of ninety. But he had already made his name before he left Africa by his famous compendium of the Talmud (still familiar to every Jewish student under the name of 'Alfas'), which eliminated irrelevant discussion and formulated the final decision in all points of current practice. This great work, together with Rashi's commentary and Nathan of Rome's dictionary, was mainly responsible for the successful preference and perpetuation in Europe of the ancient rabbinical traditions of the schools of Mesopotamia.

WHAT THE CHILDREN SAY

Subscribers of the CANADIAN JEWISH REVIEW are invited to send in little stories about their youngsters or children they know, what they say and do in interesting situations. Write down what your little one said to-day and mail it to the What-the-Children-Say Editor, REVIEW office, in Toronto or Montreal. Give the child's full name, age, address and the name of his parents. One dollar will be paid for every story printed.

Jason Greenblatt, age six, son of Mr. and Mrs. Greenblatt, 26 Lockwell Street, Quebec, came home from school one day and showed his mother a gold paper star. "Who gave you that?" asked his mother. "Oh, the teacher said she would give a star to the one who could pretend he was asleep the best," answered Jason, "and I won it." The next day he came home with another star and his mother asked him how he got that one. "Oh, for sleeping as usual," answered Jason

Death of Samuel Alatri, 1889. For more than sixty years, in the crucial period of the Risorgimento, he had led the community of Rome and borne the brunt of its battle for freedom. Time after time he was chosen as spokesman of the fruitless deputation which waited annually upon the Pope to obtain some amelioration in the position of the Jews: and his eloquence was such that even the reactionary Gregory XVI called him 'our Cicero'. Alatri saw his efforts crowned with success when Rome was entered in 1870 by the armies of Victor Emmanuel, and the long period of oppression which had disgraced the last three centuries came automatically to an end. After this he entered parliamentary life for a time, but he ultimately returned to the narrower sphere of civic and communal activity. At his death, which occurred at the age of eighty-four years, the Syndic of Rome declared: 'The City of Rome loved him like a father, and now she mourns his death like a father.'

MAY 21ST.

Jews admitted to Brandenburg, 1671. The history of the Jews in the Margravate during the middle ages had been as chequered as in the rest of Germany: and as late as 1573 there had been a final total expulsion from the whole country. The Great Elector, however, justified his title by his tolerant policy towards the Jews who had been expelled from Vienna. By an edict of May 21st., 1670, all of the cities of the Mark were opened to them under fair, though somewhat galling, conditions. This was the genesis of the modern community of Berlin, to-day amongst the most important in Europe.

MAY 22ND.

Executions on charge of desecrating the Host at Brussels, 1370. A wealthy Jewish financier of the neighbouring city of Enghien had been murdered in his garden. In order to cover their traces, the assassins spread the report that the Jews had stolen the consecrated elements from a church for the purpose of maltreating them. In consequence, the whole community of the capital was arrested. Many hundreds (it was said) were burned alive on May 22nd., 1370: and a general banishment from the whole country followed. The event, and the pretended miracle which followed, is still commemorated in a special chapel in the cathedral church of St. Gudule, in Brussels, with stained glass windows and Gobelin tapestries depicting what was supposed to have occurred. However, when quingennial celebrations were being prepared in 1870, they were prohibited by Pope Pius IX in consequence of a vital forgery which had just been discovered in the fundamental documents.

MAY 23RD.

Inquisition established in Portugal, 1536. The forced baptisms of 1497 had filled the country with crypto-Jews, who followed the precepts of their old religion almost without concealment. But the very circumstances of their conversion, to which was added the aversion of the people as a whole, rendered it impossible to institute too rigid an enquiry into their orthodoxy. It was not, therefore, until the accession of John III, in 1521, that there was any serious attempt on the part of the crown to secure the introduction of an inquisition on the Spanish model. A large proportion of the principal persons in the country continued, however, averse: the Papacy (in whose hands the decision rested) was none too enthusiastic: and the Marranos extended their intrigues against the proposals to Rome itself, backed up by lavish contributions in money. For a long time, therefore, all attempts were in vain: and when at last, on December 17th, 1531, the desired Bull was obtained from the Pope, its effects were almost immediately nullified by a series of pardons and suspensions. But ultimately the Marranos found themselves unable to raise the enormous sums so lavishly promised by their agent, while at the same time the Emperor Charles V (King of Spain) was increasing his insistencies in the other direction. Accordingly, on May 23rd., 1536, Paul III issued a definitive Bull in which the establishment of the Inquisition in Portugal was definitely announced and all previous mitigatory measures were repealed. Thus the Holy Office embarked, in Portugal and its colonies, upon a career which outdid in its horror even that of the sister tribunal of Spain.

A Little Self Respect

I have a letter in which the writer complains bitterly at the disgrace that so many Jewish organizations go so far afield inviting "goy politicians" at Jewish public meetings. There is something in the complaint. Of course, I can't see any objection in having any authority or personality—be his religious affiliation what may—to speak before a Jewish gathering. However, too often are "goy politicians" brought to Jewish meetings due to the influence of an individual Jew who is seeking favor in the sight of the goy office holder. Thus the Jewish lodge or any other organization is misued as a tool for self-advancement. That to my mind is a dangerous condition. And what more, the goy politician has no message to bring to Jews. After all, generally speaking, Jews are intelligent. What takes place then? Well, the goy politician indulges in telling his Jewish auditors what wonderful people the Jews are! With it one can often hear a note of insincerity ringing throughout. To the thinking conscious Jew, the entire business is nauseating. I agree full heartedly with the correspondent that self respecting Jews are not to permit their lodges or clubs to become tools in the hands of the goy or Jewish politician.

Be Thou a Man!

I had occasion the other day to listen to a non-Jew speak to Jews on "Jews". While much what the speaker said was complimentary—yet there was an implication in the address which was far from flattering to dignified Jews. Hence when the chairman called upon me to have my say, I spoke frankly and honestly. Of course, I took exception to some of the things the speaker implied concerning our people. I pointed out that we Jews do not care to be tolerated. We want to be appreciated for our unique contribution to civilization. It later came to me that some few felt that perhaps it was not proper for me to have taken the speaker to task. This leads me to say that we Jews must stop cringing. The galut forced us to take all—even humiliation. And the Jew who is still shtetoized will cringe and bend—though truth may be at stake. But the emancipated Jew must ever stand up for Jewish and human truths. He must speak out—though often it be a mere voice in the wilderness. Shame upon that Jew who has not the courage of his convictions. To my critics I hand over the old Arabic adage—"When one travels, dogs will bark". We "stolze junge Juden" are travelling. We do not care to be "moyfesniks"—moral cowards.

Jacob Goldstein

Last Friday evening Jacob Goldstein was kissed into eternal sleep by the angel of death. And Jewish Montreal is the poorer today because of his departure. Mr. Goldstein belonged to a family of "community builders". His life is characterized by untiring personal service. He gave not only of his substance, as so many of us do, but he gave also of himself to community life. He was among the first to have helped in the cause of Reform Judaism in Canada. He labored in helping educate the Jewish immigrant by starting night classes at the Baron de Hirsch. Especially was he active in the cause of Jewish Youth. The Young Men's Hebrew Association, and the Jewish Boy Scout Movement owe much to Jacob Goldstein. Indeed, Jacob Goldstein will be missed. That to my mind is a high tribute to pay to the memory of a man. Some so live that when they pass on, they leave no empty space. But not so in the case of Mr. Goldstein. His life was woven right into the very fabric of our Jewish Montreal.

Dr. Holmes Advises Jews to Visit Palestine

It is strange to observe the multitudes of Jews travelling to every portion of the globe, but somehow they do not care to go to Palestine. Thus comes now the leader of the Community Church, and gives Jews a bit of advice—which I think is certainly timely. He says: "Go to Palestine! See a land inscribed in every nook and corner with Bible stories. Get acquainted with an international situation of thrilling and momentous interest. And study at first hand the development of the bravest social venture in the world. Go to Palestine!" It takes a "goy" to teach Jews a thing or two. In my travels I have met with Jews who visited China and Turkey. But Palestine—no—it's too Jewish for them. Well, now that the "goyim" are pilgrimaging to Palestine, perhaps it will become fashionable for Jews to visit the land of the Jews.

The invisible difference

Many motor oils look alike, but there is a vast difference in the way they perform. Unfortunately this difference is difficult to detect.

The invisible difference which makes one motor oil better than another must be inherent in the crude from which it is made.

There you have the reason why Marvelube gives better engine lubrication than oils refined from ordinary crudes. Imperial Oil searched the world over for a better crude—and in South America they found it.

From it they make Marvelube—a pure, carbon-free, full-bodied oil that resists the extreme heats and pressures of modern engine operation.

Aircraft operators prefer Marvelube because better lubrication means greater safety and longer intervals between overhauls. Motorists prefer Marvelube because it is the ideal oil for modern motors. It ensures greater power, greater flexibility and greater economy.

There is a grade of Marvelube refined to meet exactly the specifications of your car. Consult the Marvelube Chart at Imperial Oil service stations and dealers.

Boy Crushed To Death

Lewis Phillips, 11-year-old son of Alderman and Mrs. Nathan Phillips of 26 Lauder avenue, died as the result of terrible injuries received when he was crushed by an automobile against a post at the corner of Glenholme and Rosemount avenues late Sunday afternoon. A year ago he won first prize among Toronto elementary piano pupils. He met death while posting a letter to which his father accepted an invitation to attend a banquet this week. From behind came an automobile dashing across Rosemount avenue as the driver sought to avoid a collision with another car, and the boy was crushed between the post and the automobile. His skull was fractured and his body terribly mangled. Doctors summoned said that the child had died instantly. The driver of the automobile was Thomas Andrews, 52, of 293 Catherine street north, Hamilton. He faces a charge of manslaughter laid by police of Ossington avenue division.

Andrews told police that he was driving south on Glenholme avenue and on reaching Rosemount was forced to swerve his automobile to avoid hitting another car driven

(The Gas Fired Refrigerator)

THINK of the satisfaction in knowing that you can go to the refrigerator and find food for the meal that is as good as the day it was put there.

THINK of the comfort you'll enjoy in knowing that the daintiest vegetables may be kept for days without losing their native crispness. Meats and poultry are kept just slightly above the freezing point so they retain that delicious, wholesome taste that means the greatest nutriment.

MILK and cream do not sour or "turn" in the hottest weather and fancy pastries remain as though freshly baked, because there is no moisture in a gas-fired refrigerator.

NOT a sound from the gas-fired refrigerator. The "tiny flame that freezes" and a trickle of water is all that is required to operate this most up-to-date refrigerator.

Last week's REVIEW carried an article on the program of activities which has been planned for the new Y.M.H.A. of Montreal. It arrived in several type-written sheets buried among which was a very diffident reference to the fact that Harvey Golden is director of the association. Now, the REVIEW has had a vast experience with the burning thirst for publicity that men acquire with their successes, their speeches, their altruism, their public benefactions to charity and their staggering contributions to causes. But its experience with the modesty of men is practically null and void. The lonely hall of fame created in the estimation of this column has more empty pedestals than have those halls of fame created by the other more liberal members of the REVIEW staff. It must have one of these pedestals dusted off and moved out a little for the bust of Harvey Golden.

This week Toronto Jewry saw a campaign for $100,000 to be spent on character building work among under-privileged boys. Some of the money will be used for a new club building and the rest will go toward the purchase of a camp site and buildings for a boys' camp. The Jewish Boys' Camp is conducted by the B'nai B'rith lodge and this camp and the Jewish Boys' Club are subsidized by Federation. At present writing the results of the campaign are not known but even if the objective is not reached this time the campaign will not have been in vain. It is a good thing, of course, for community and leaders to work for such a cause.

But the significant part of this particular campaign is the revelation that here is remedial social effort which appears to be part of an organized program in preventive work. It is no single work, it is the combined effort of two organizations and it indicates an intelligence without which much social labor is worthless. It would appear that information has been gathered about the boys' work situation, that this information has been studied and interpreted and that the making of plans was the third step which characterizes thoughtful endeavour.

A program of social interest must be related to other phases of work in that environment and to all the points known about conditions surrounding the group to be benefited otherwise it can not remedy. A tardy realization of this one fact is now taking Jewish social service in Canada out of the bassinette stage. There seems to be a growing respect for surveys, knowledge and study and this should always precede action to keep it from being muddled. The campaign in Toronto shows a dawning intelligence about the kind of service which should be given. It means that the leaders see the urgent necessity of groups thinking with other groups in relation to community needs. By so doing there will be fewer isolated pieces of philanthropy and more needs more suitably filled.

In another corner of the Jewish world, Johannesburg, South Africa, a Jewish farmer recently received ten lashes as part of sentence for beating to death a native on his employ. It was the first time a white man was ever lashed there and before the punishment was inflicted attempts were made to have the infliction of lashes suspended chiefly because it was feared the prestige of the whites would be endangered. The district was seething what with general elections close at hand and this possibility of raising a political issue which might involve the South African color problem and the Jewish question as well. The judge who imposed sentence bears the name of Saul Solomon, not a Jew but of Jewish descent. Sometimes it is charged that Jewish justices lean backwards when sentencing Jews and impose sentences harsher than they might ordinarily to show that they are not partial. But in this case it was apparently felt by the judge that the Jew had visited such terrible cruelties upon the native that his punishment would be insufficient in serving seven years at hard labor unless he might also feel some of the physical pain he himself had inflicted on the black man. However human it is to react to a certain situation with gnashing teeth and clenched fists, it is always deplorable when a judge imposes a sentence that includes lashes no matter what crime has been committed. Such a sentence puts forward the spirit of public vengeance from which the sensative recoil. Lashes can not make the culprit better and they can not act as a deterrent to crimes of madness any more than fear of capital punishment ever does. The most and best such punishment accomplishes is to help debase and brutalize a community and contribute to degradation in the human struggle. I.I.a.

She was as repellent to me as the rest of her class. I could never bring myself to accept a cup of tea from her hands. And yet I could not help liking her spirit. She was truthful and affectionate. This and, above all, her yearning for our common birthplace appealed to me strongly. I was very much inclined to think that in spite of the horrible life she led she was a good girl. To hold this sort of opinion about a woman of her kind seemed to be an improper thing to do. I knew that according to the conventional idea concerning women of the street they were all the most hideous creatures in the world in every respect. So I would tell myself that I must consider her, too, one of the most hideous creatures in the world in every respect. But I did not. For I knew that at heart she was better than some of the most respectable people I had met. It was one of the astonishing discrepancies I had discovered in the world. Also it was one of the things I had found to be totally different from what people usually thought they were. I was gradually realizing that the average man or woman was full of all sorts of false notions.

THE FIRST STEP

The first step towards baby's health is just this—give him plenty of milk. No other food can take its place, no other food will give him such a sure foundation for health and strength.

Dr. Hastings says "Give every child a quart of milk a day". That's splendid advice, and we add "Give him pure, clean, RICH City Dairy Milk." For that's the milk most mothers have chosen for the past twenty-five years. Telephone KIngsdale 6151 for this good Milk.

RIO RITA AT PRINCESS, STARRING LOCAL DANCER

"The week of May 20th will witness the first appearance in Toronto of the far-famed RIO RITA which played for 2 years in New York. Described as a musical romance of the Rio Grande, this musical play brings to the stage a glittering musical score, brilliant stage settings and a cast large and important, as well as a corps de ballet, a beauty chorus and two orchestras. Among the featured members of the cast are Arthur Rogers, tenor, last seen in "My Maryland." June Blane, prima donna, Hilda Eckler, well known and talented Toronto dancer, who will be seen in a new musical comedy on Broadway next season.

A male singing chorus is also carried, and sang with stirring effect the "March of the Rangers," which is one of the song hits of the piece. The many scenes are beautiful in the extreme including the Mesa de Francisera, the underground speakeasy, the Moonlit Patio of General Esteban, the Floating Cabaret and the Moonlight Triple Wedding. Especial interest attaches to the appearance here of Miss Eckler, as it is th most important engagement she has yet played. She will be seen in the famous "Moonlight Ballet," as premier danseuse, in the Black and White, and also in a special acrobatic dance of her own creation.

BARRIE AT THE VICTORIA

"The Little Minister" to be presented next week

For presentation next week the Victoria has chosen another Barrie play.

It would be hard to say which is more popular in Toronto — Barrie or Dickens, but the Victoria, we are sure, is safe in assuming that Barrie is at least as popular as Dickens. We have proven that.

Barrie, by the way, is one of Miss Taliaferro's favorite authors and she is delighted that she is to follow up the tremendous success she gained in "What Every Woman Knows." She is an ideal type for Barrie interpretations, and patrons are promised a rare treat in this dramatization of "The Little Minister."

The story, as some of you will remember, is a genuine love-story, set in Scotland, about the little minister and the gipsy girl with whom he falls in love. It has all the quaint, subtle humour and pathos for which Barrie is famous.

Editorial

reverted Rabbi Berlin once again to assume charge of the organization and rescue it from oblivion.

True, we forgot about this convention and were under the impression that no convention had been held since 1925. The slip is accounted for by the fact that in 1928 the opinion generally prevailed that the Mizrachi was dead. We clearly recall the tenor of the comments of the Yiddish press at the time of the convention. The weakness and disintegration of the organization were obvious and generally discussed in the press.

Here then is the situation: One convention in May 1925; a second one in January 1928, marked by dissension, and despair, incapable even of finding a leader or leaders to pull it out of the mire. Is this a sign of vigor and vitality?

The Mizrachi has recuperated somewhat since 1928. Admitted. Why? Because Rabbi Berlin was brought back to America to rebuild his organization. The party is largely a one man affair. It shows a certain semblance of life when Rabbi Berlin is here. It becomes comatose when he departs.

Latterly the organization was strengthened in a measure by the acquisition of Gedalyah Bublik as full-time worker. Mr. Bublik is the gentleman to whom Mr. Levene refers as the "nationally known editor of the Daily Jewish News." Mr. Levene forgot to add the words "olav hasholom" to the name of the newspaper. The "Daily News" (Tageblatt) is no longer among us, and if it is known anywhere now it is in a better world than ours, where every Jew is no doubt a Mizrachi. It is possible that Mr. Bublik will prove a better Mizrachi leader than newspaper editor, and the organization will enjoy a happier fate than did his paper.

Mr. Levene is wroth because we declared that the Mizrachi has no branches in America and proceeds to enumerate a list of cities where the organization is supposed to be entrenched. We admit that we have heard the names of those cities before, but we have our doubts as to the existence of bona fide, dues-paying organizations there. We are familiar with the way the Mizrachi recruits its delegations. It works on the assumption that every synagogue is ipso facto a constituent of the Mizrachi organization. We were present at a Canadian Mizrachi Convention in Toronto one time. There were in attendance several hundred delegates. We were closely in touch with the Zionist situation in Canada at the time, in the capacity of active member of the Canadian Zionist executive, and we knew that there were not five Mizrachi societies in Canada altogether. We will require proof before we are satisfied that the Mizrachi has a membership of constituent societies. However, this is neither here nor there. The fact is—and it is obvious to any observer of the Zionist scene—that Mizrachi as a Zionist religious ideology has no ground in American Jewish life where religion is not strong enough to bar its adherents from affiliation with the ordinary bourgeois Zionism. Mizrachi had its place in Russia and Poland under the leadership of Reines as a bridge between modern Herzlian Zionism and the literalism of the rigid Orthodoxy. Of what use are its sanctions in America among an orthodox Jewry which desecrates the Sabbath and wantonly violates most of the Jewish religious ordinances?

Mr. Levene is rather amusing when he claims for Rabbi Berlin that he is "known throughout the Jewish world and has contributed towards the rehabilitation of the Eretz Yisroel no less than other Meshulachem-Weizmann-Sokoloff (sic) Col. Kisch, etc." Rabbi Berlin is a scion of a famous rabbinic family in Lithuania. But we dare say that there is a vast difference between his type of personality and that of his illustrious ancestor of Wolozin, or his relative of Brest Litowsk. We have heard Rabbi Berlin speak on many occasions. We have read many of his writings. We have heard him discussed by leading Zionists. We know his role and record in Zionism. We have our opinion of him. As an independent journalist we need not fear to say that Rabbi Berlin does not strike our fancy as being the highest type of idealist. In any case it is both impudent and nonsensical to mention his name in the same breath with the names of Weizmann and Sokolow, and to place him on an equal level with them.

Finally, we come to the most important point of all:

Leaving aside our "by the way" observations regarding Mizrachi—the observations on which Mr. Levene concentrated all his ammunition in his letter—we reiterate our major theme as it bears on the Canadian situation which Mr. Levene has not denied or challenged:

(a) The Mizrachi have no societies or branches in Canada.

(b) The Mizrachi have at least on two occasions sent delegations to Canada on the eve of Keren Hayesod campaigns to threaten to run campaigns of their own synchronously with the Keren Hayesod Campaigns in Montreal with prejudicial effect on the Keren Hayesod campaigns.

(c) That the Canadian Federation of Zionists have given them grants in order to buy off their threatened campaigns.

(d) That this year the Zionist Federations have paid them five thousand dollars to call off their campaign.

(e) That the Zionists have had to promise to recommend to the Congress not to deduct the amount of the Canadian grant (taken from Keren Hayesod funds) from the appropriation allowed to the Mizrachi by the congress out of Keren Hayesod funds over which the congress alone has powers of disposition.

(f) That such conduct and tactics are tantamount to a hold-up.

We have no axes to grind against the Mizrachi organization. We appreciate that in the early days of its inception, it served a useful purpose in the scheme of Zionist development. At the present time we regard it purely as a clerical party, and our attitude towards it is one of any progressive person towards clericalism. It is our belief that it has no place or future in America. It has been on the verge of extinction several times. It has been saved by the efforts of its head, Rabbi Berlin, a very clever party tactician, but one for whom we frankly do not entertain a consuming admiration.

The Mizrachi have held a convention in Pittsburgh in the early part of this week. When the reports are in we shall comment on it.

Safe and Comfortable

THE Ford car rolls down country roads as smoothly and comfortably as over trans-continental highways. Roomy front and rear compartments—lots of leg room, head room, body room—make it the ideal family car.

The safety features of the Ford car give driver and passengers a sense of security and well-being. They enable one to avoid dangers in traffic and the inbuilt strength of the car resists damage from the careless driving of "the other fellow."

DURABILITY—The durability of the Ford car has never been fully measured because one year of consistent driving leaves it like new. But it is possible to estimate by the materials that go into it, the finer alloy steels, higher grade equipment and better basic quality in every part, that many thousands of miles of service are built into its chassis.

SAFETY—The fully enclosed six brake screws grip the flying wheels with silent power. The windshield is of shatterproof glass. An all-steel body gives maximum protection. At high speeds the unique and effective Ford spring and shock absorber system provides perfect balance.

COMFORT—Deeply upholstered seat cushions, set at a restful angle, match in comfort your easy chair. Large windows allow unobstructed vision and open wide in warm weather. Four Houdaille hydraulic shock absorbers, and the unique Ford feature of transverse, semi-elliptic springs, give the effect of riding on air.

DEMONSTRATION—Ask your Ford dealer to let you drive a Ford car. He will be glad to take you out. Select the steepest hills, the heaviest going—you will be amazed at the power at your command. Head for the busiest streets. Drive alongside other cars. Try the quick getaway, the swift pickup in second, the easy gear-shift. Feel the smooth, sure action of the six brake system.

A demonstration will convince you of the outstanding merit of the Ford car. Drive it yourself, there is no better test.

Also request your Ford dealer to show you the hidden, inbuilt quality features of the car which make it so enduring.

TIME PAYMENT—If you prefer to buy out of income, you will find the authorized time payment plan offered by all Ford dealers most attractive.
